Dawson Group wins naval clean-up contract

Pacific Business News (Honolulu)

A Native Hawaiian-owned small business has won a Navy environmental contract that could be worth $30 million.

Dawson Group Inc. of Honolulu has been awarded a contract for remedial action to excavate and remove contaminated soil, cap landfills, remove and maintain containment and piping systems, and treat soil and groundwater.

The cost-plus-award-fee contract carries a guaranteed minimum of $60,000 and a $30 million ceiling for work in Hawaii or at other sites within the Pacific Division, Naval Facilities Engineering Command area of responsibility. That includes Guam, Japan, Okinawa, Johnston Atoll, Diego Garcia, and other areas in the Pacific and Indian oceans. The contract anticipates that 90 percent of the work will be in Hawaii, however.

This contract was offered as a sole-source procurement to the U.S. Small Business Agency, Hawaii District Office, for a certified 8(a) firm owned by a Native Hawaiian Organization. The Naval Facilities Engineering Command, Pacific Division Environmental Contracts Office, Pearl Harbor, is the contracting activity.
